The Rocker Who Shatters Me Terri Anne Browning 2014-12-01 Mature Content. Not Intended For Readers Under The Age Of 17 A Bet... Yes, I made a bet with my best friend-my now ex-best friend. It had been a stupid, heat of the moment kind of thing. I'd just wanted to get her out of my system and move one. Instead I've lived to regret it ever since. I lost the girl I loved, a girl that possessed my very soul. Now I can't even get close to Natalie. She thinks all she ever meant to me was just the means to the end of a stupid, stupid game. ...For a Bet! In the span of one night I'd gone from thinking I had a future with the man I loved to SHATTERED at his feet. I can't get over it. The pain is too strong, too destructive as it festers more and more inside of me. And then my friend came up with the perfect revenge for both our broken hearts. "I bet you..." Those three little words gave me a reason to ball my pain up and throw it back in Devlin Cutter's face. I would let him back in, let him think he had a chance with me once again. And then I would walk away, leaving him broken and bleeding at my feet as he once had left me. This time he would be the one SHATTERED.

McKeesport 2007 Located at the confluence of the Youghiogheny and Monongahela Rivers, McKeesport was settled by David McKee in 1755. In 1769, McKee acquired land from the Colonial government and one of his sons, John, laid out a village that became known as McKee's Port because a ferry was operating there. Early industries included coal mining and the building of flatboats, and in 1851, an ironrolling mill was started. Industry continued to boom as steamboats and railroads soon appeared, and in 1872, National Tube was founded and joined by other steel industries and foundries. The growing industries created an abundance of jobs, and immigrants from throughout Europe flocked to the area. McKeesport still maintains a strong ethnic heritage. Through vintage photographs, McKeesport documents the history of this once booming steel town from the development and subsequent loss of its major industry to its recent revitalization.
